

Joy Taylor

I am watching with horror, shame and a sickening sense of deja vu at the developments in Afghanistan and feel impelled to write. I want to live in and for future generations to live in a world where we focus our energies on finding common ground and peaceful resolution to international conflict, and not on the patterns of waste of life through war, invasions, social control and then walking away, waste of life through directing vast amounts of money into militarisation and surveillance rather than upliftment of all beings.