Australia's alliance with the United States has taken us as Australian citizens into at least four wars since WW11 that have been pointless. And, now there are mumblings and propaganda that is conditioning Australian's to believe we have an enemy in China. A war against China would be sheer madness and in the event China might need to use its military might against us as part of the alliance with the USA, the first place it would attack is Pine Gap, the US spy facility. Pine Gap, and indeed most of northern Australia that would face extreme military attack, sits on some of the most ancient historic sites in the world. Sites that the oldest living culture on Earth have cared for and have been of great significance to. I dread to think of how many of the Earth's and First Nation's people's archaeological sites could be damaged should there ever be a war with a superpower that is China.
