I found that one is badly missing from the 8 suggested subjects : It's called "Moral Responsibility" of political leadership.

The abuse of Moral Responsibility of Political leadership is referring to some very unscrupulous leaders with overgrown chances of abusing power, who steadily and systematically trashed Australia Morally, Economically, Socially during over a decade. Manipulating processes, holding back- and distributing misleading information etc etc. Some of those leaders really should be standing in front of some kind of independent elected representative body and if found responsible for the abuse of power causing decline during the past years, then they should be accused in court for criminal and unconstitutional activities, causing harm to all what Australia is (..used to be). How is it said in "The Castle"? "...It's in the vibe of the Constitution...", ...but not only.
